Deciding on a Block Ice Shaver VS. Cubed

Block Ice Shaver:

Southern Snow, Snowie Block, Swan SI-100E

Pros

- Produces the softest snow
- Produces 3-4 times more than the output of a Cubed Shaver
- Made for longevity
- Replacement parts can be easily found

Cons

- Ice blocks are not always available
- Block ice is more expensive
- Training time may take longer for employees

Cubed Ice Shaver:

Hatsuyuki HC-8E, Snowie 1000

Pros

- Cubed ice is readily available
- Fairly inexpensive
- These machines are simple to use and learn
- Small in size

Convenient to transport

Cons

- Needs uniform cubed ice to produce the best product
- The ice produced is coarser and crunchier
- Accessories often need to be purchased separately (i.e., foot pedal for easier use)

Simple Syrup Recipes

For our simple syrup recipe, there's a general rule of 5 lbs. of sugar and 1 oz. of preservative per gallon of simple syrup.

5 lbs. sugar + 2.5 qt. water + 1 oz. preservative = 1 gal. syrup

25 lbs. sugar + 3 gal. & 1 pt. water + 5 oz. preservative = 5 gal. syrup

50 lbs. sugar + 6 gal. & 1 qt. water + 10 oz. preservative = 10 gal. syrup

100 lbs. sugar + 12.5 gal. water + 20 oz. preservative = 20 gal. syrup

TIP: Simple syrup recipes are completely customizable to your taste. If this recipe is too sweet, or not sweet enough, we recommend either adding, or taking away, half to one pound of sugar at a time (depending upon your taste).

TIP: Before you add the sugar, we recommend filling your mixing container/vat with a bit of hot water. This will help when it comes to combining the mixture. After adding the sugar, keep adding hot water until the container/vat has the recommended amount, then stir away.

TIP: For 20 gals. of syrup, we recommend adding your sugar 50 lbs. at a time, and fully mixing it before adding the other 50 lbs. This will help ensure that the sugar is thoroughly mixed.

Concentrate Recipes

Generally, add 1 oz. of concentrate to every quart of simple syrup (or simple syrup substitute).

There are exceptions to this rule. See those below.

½ oz. concentrate + simple syrup to fill the bottle = Pt. of Flavored Syrup

1 oz. concentrate + simple syrup to fill the bottle = Qt. of Flavored Syrup

4 oz. concentrate + simple syrup to fill the bottle = Gal. of Flavored Syrup

Concentrate Recipes Exceptions

Crybaby: 4 oz. citric acid + simple syrup to fill the bottle = Qt. of Flavor Syrup

Dill Pickle: NO SUGAR. Mix with water only.
